BOARD OF SUPERVISORS

Mosnay, January 18, 1892. The Board of Supervisors met purspant to adjournment and was called to order by the chairman; roll called; quorum present.

Mr. Frost announced the desig of Harry H. Ives, ex-supervisor of the Fourth ward, and moved that the rules be suspended and that the Board take a recess until four o'clock this afternoon, and that the Board attend the funeral of deceased this afternoon in a body, and that the chairman appoint a committee of three to draft appropriate resolutions. Carried.

AFTER RECESS.

The board being again called to order at 4 o'clock p. m., a petition was read from the Register of Deeds reistive to the copying of certain abstract books in his office, and on motion of Mr. Emmous the same was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings.

On motion of Mr. Benjamin, all claims against the county now on file with the clerk, and which may be filed today, were referred to the proper committees.

On motion of Mr. Ulrich, the board

The various species of pigs, constituare met with in Europe, northern Africa and southern Asia, and Its islands, altogether fall in the new world, where their places are taken by animals of inferior size and slightly different organization called "pecearnes." Of peccaries, only two species are known to exist, namely, the collared peccary and the white-lipped peccary. of the latter of which we now give an Illustration from some specimens lately added to the Zoological society's collection. The peccaries have a wide range in America, extending from Mexico throughout the central and southern portions of the continent down to Paraguay and the northern provinces of the Argentine Republic. The larger mammals being scarce in these parts of America, peccaries are much sought after by the native hunters as articles of food, and much prized when they are obtained. The peccary, however, is provided with a strongly odoriferous giand, situated in the hinder part of its back, and unless this gland be removed as soon as the animal is killed, its flesh is said to be hardly estable. The collared peccary is the commoner of the two species, and the one most frequently met with in captivity in Europe. In the Zoological society's gardens it has bred on more than one occasion, but produces only two young ones at a time, fostead of the numerous progeny of the true pigs. The white-lipped peccary is a larger and flercer animal, and is said to be rather dreaded by the native hunter when met in large herds. Some singular stories are told in British Guiana about persons having been compelled to mount trees in order to escape their attack, and to pass many hours of siege in this condition, before the infuriated peccaries chose to move away. But it is a little doubtful, perhaps, whether this is more than a sportsman's tale. In captivity, at any rate, the white-lipped peccary seems to be a well-behaved and inoffensive animal.—Black and White.

The Grette of Feelipe The gratto of Positipo was enchanting. It is an ancient gullery roughly hown through the mountain, between Naples and the wenderful region that opens upon the other side. Narrow, lefty, begrimed with the smoke and first of benturies; lighted dimly by a row of lamps that dwindled in the distance, and became just in the glimmer-ing disk of daylight at the apposite end; filled with the musical tinkle of balls from the flooks of greats that had been
